Design Choice: I chose a two-column format for the shopping cart page since the only important information is the product that is in the cart, along with its price. This keeps the layout concise and easy to understand. I also wanted to include the necessary information, such as the glazing selection and the amount selected, along with the option to quickly edit the product details so that the user doesn't have to leave the cart page. This reduces the cognitive load and effort for the user. The checkout button has a strong call-to-action so that the user is visually guided through the process of making the purchase.
